PRESS RELEASE

BML reminds the public to be aware of fraudulent emails and calls

We have been advised that a number of customers have received emails and even phone calls from parties impersonating BML. Customers are usually asked to provide their personal information such as Internet Banking username, personal email address and passwords to a false website which looks similar to our Internet Banking login page. Some customers have even received phone calls from people who say they are calling from BML and who ask for the same kind of information.

We advise our customers to take extra caution and not to respond to these requests. Customers should only use our official website www.bankofmaldives.com.mv or their BML Mobile App to log onto Internet Banking.

We would like to emphasize that BML will never ask customers to share their password or personal details.

If customers have any questions in relation to this or any of our services, our Customer Service team is available 24-hours, 7-days a week at phone 3330200, email customerservice@bml.com.mv or our social media channels <http://facebook.com/bankofmaldives> and <http://twitter.com/bankofmaldives>.
