What security measures does BML Internet Banking use?

BML Internet Banking uses several different methods to protect your information. All information within BML Internet Banking uses SSL protocol for transferring data. SSL is an encryption that creates a secure environment for the information being transferred between your browser and Bank of Maldives Plc. At a high level, SSL uses public key cryptography to secure transmissions over the Internet. In practice, your browser will send a message via SSL to the bank's server. The bank responds by sending a certificate, which contains the bank's public key. Your browser authenticates the certificate (agrees that the server is in fact Bank of Maldives'), then generates a random session key which is used to encrypt data travelling between your browser and the bank's server. This session key is encrypted using the bank's public key and sent back to the server. The bank decrypts this message using its private key, and then uses the session key for the remainder of the communication.

- Secure Socket Layer (SSL) protects data in three key ways:
- Authentication ensures that you are communicating with the correct server. This prevents another computer from impersonating Bank of Maldives Plc.
- Encryption scrambles transferred data.

- Data integrity verifies that the information sent by you to Bank of Maldives was not altered during the transfer. The system detects if data was added or deleted after you sent the message. If any tampering has occurred, the connection is dropped.

What does SSL mean?

SSL stands for Secure Socket Layer. This technology allows users to establish sessions with Internet sites that are secure, meaning they have minimal risk of external violation. Once inside the BML Internet Banking site, you are secure through our use of SSL technology.

What is encryption?

Encryption is the scrambling of information for transmission back and forth between two points. A key is required to decode the information. When you request information about your accounts, the request is sent encrypted to Bank of Maldives Plc. We then decode your request for information and send it back to you in an encrypted format. When you receive it, your information is decoded so that you can read it. Because your account information is being transmitted between you and Bank of Maldives Plc., encryption protects your account information so it cannot be intercepted and read by a third party.

What is 128-bit encryption?

There are basically two types of encryption: High and Standard. The difference between these types of encryption is the strength of capability. A High (128-bit) encryption is exponentially more powerful than a Standard (40 or 56-bit) encryption. High or 128-bit encryption means there are septillion possible keys that could fit into the lock that holds your account information, but only one that works for each time you bank online. Bank of Maldives Plc. uses the highest level of encryption (128-bit) to ensure that BML Internet Banking transmissions are secure.

What are the minimum requirements I need for my computer to Login to BML Internet Banking?
